

DeckWise Hidden Fastener Featured on Tiny House Nation

By LBM Journal / 23 hours ago

DeckWise Deck Building Products recently participated in FYI network's series Tiny House Nation. The season four, episode nine episode titled, "400 Sq. Ft. Amplified Tiny House," aired on March 4. DeckWise Hidden Siding Fasteners were used on the episode's tiny home build.

The show features homes designed and built with minimal square footage but maximum quality materials. This episode featured exterior siding made from Abaco tropical hardwood (Massaranduba) supplied by Aljoma Lumber, and fastened with DeckWise Stainless Steel Hidden Siding Fasteners.

Show personalities John Weisbarth and Zack Giffin teamed up with home owners Asha Mevlana and her Bo, Ryan, to install shiplap Massaranduba siding on her new Fayetteville, Ark. tiny home. (Asha is an acclaimed American violinist known for playing an electric 7-string viper violin and for performing with the Trans-Siberian Orchestra.)

"Our hardwood building products are becoming more and more popular all across the nation because of their affordability as well as their ease of use," said Roderick Kabel, marketing director for DeckWise. "Our hidden siding fasteners are made right here in the USA and that's something we are very proud to say. Siding isn't just slapping wood to the side of a house anymore. We see many different applications where 'design capabilities' were the deciding factor for choosing our fasteners."

Tiny House Nation on FYI follows renovation experts and hosts John Weisbarth and Zack Giffin as they travel across America to show off ingenious small spaces and the inventive people who live in them.
