

HYPE!

with Michelle Road

TO REVIEWS: HYPE

HYPE HYPE HYPE

THE WORST PART OF BREAKING UP

Once the furniture has been split, the dog fought over and the bank balance divided, there's still one thing to go to: And the struggle following a relationship break-up — all these special songs once shared with an ex, which become off-limits when it's all over. Sydney-based band Pincab in Flux captured the predicament on their pop-rock debut single The Last Song I'm Writing On You. The lyrics detail wasted playlists, deleted ring tones, burnt concert tickets and dodging songs on the radio, singer La Roberts says.

"It's always the good music that soundtracks a relationship," she says. "There are entire catalogues I've lost after break-up. I've learned not to attach any of my favorite songs or artists to relationships in the future. Coldplay's A Rush Of Blood To The Head — that was a hard record for me to lose."

Who: Pincab (supporting Thirty Seconds To Mars)

When: Sat, Jul 10

Where: The Bow

Tickets: $30 + BF www.timeble.com.au